There are a few nod to the original, and even the assassin from the first one who got away, but it's more of a side-quel to the previous film.

And for once, i quite enjoyed this straight to blu-ray movie. Berenger looks a little constipated as the target, and has playing card skills (see what they did there!!), but does very little else, thus making the scenes with him and his guards, boring and a waste of time.

The rest of the film is silly, but in a ridiculous, enjoyable way. The new assassins are more accessible than the the ones in the tournament, because they do a lot more than just shoot and run, they have a lot more involvement with the story, and a lot of scenes.

Deaths are inventive, which for a film in this sub-genre is vital, and it's very funny at times.

There is a twist, but you can see it from a mile off, and the best part of the film, is the final kill, because it's fresh not to drag out the point of interests death (you will know what i mean when you see the film).

Plus it's the best film ever to feature exploding cannonball midgets. I LOVED the first one. Was incredibly tickled when Santa stuck it in my stocking so when my husband got this for me for our anniversary, well... I was dying to watch it. Compared to the first, horrible. On it's own, mediocre. I felt like I was watching something inspired by the filming style of Natural Born Killers, but not in a good way. It's like they went "oooooh, I like that" but didn't really think of how it fit to the movie. The Tremors weren't on the same level of crazy as they were in the first. Honestly, their characters felt like a rip off of Devil's Rejects. None of the characters are really developed and I didn't find myself excited in the least to see what was going to happen with the assassins. It is crammed with action and is fun for blowups and interesting murders but it's not enough to save the film. I will probably watch it again but not really recommend it to anyone. This film was supposed to be mainly about the Three Tremor Brothers, who are Darwin, Lester and Jeeves, yet only one has yet confirmed there return, who is Maury Sterling reprising his role as Lester Tremor. Nothing official has been confirmed by Chris Pine. But Kevin Durand who played Jeeves, has already passed on it. On January 13th, a casting call sheet was posted on spoiler websites containing information that only Jeeves and Lester will have a cameo and they will be led by their sister named AK-47, played by Autumn Reeser. Another Tremor family member, supposedly named "Papa Tremor," will be played by Michael Parks. Although in fact this may make no sense because the Tremors history involves the phrase, "Same Skank mom, different deadbeat dad," which would hold true to the characters not knowing who any of their fathers were. First of all the Unrated Version runs approx. 140 seconds longer than the R-Rated version. These new scenes feature more violence and sex making it a logical Unrated version.
